

What Lies Beneath...? by Jennie Wood (computer manipulated digital image)

Beacon Hill, Ellesborough is crowned by a small yet very distinctive group of trees. "My wood is a small copse that doesn't have a name," says photographer Jennie Wood.

"Because these trees stand alone, in isolation, they evoke most strongly the character of the Chiltern Hills, their long and ancient history and the many woods that cover their ridges, escarpments, vales and valleys. This hill has an aura – it has a quality that is mysterious and mythical, a feeling enhanced by these trees."
